

The procedure used to meet the FEC requirements of individuals whose contributions are in excess of $200.00 in an election cycle is as follows: On the invitation that is sent to individuals requesting a donation, the following message is prominently displayed. "Contributions are not tax deductible. Candidates are required to report the name, mailing address, employer and occupation for individuals with aggregate contributions over $200 in an election cycle. Corporate checks are not acceptable for federal elections." A letter is sent within one week after I receive the donation requesting the missing information. If I have not received a reply within a resonable amount of time (ususally two weeks), then I send a second letter with a self addressed stamped envelope requesting the missing information. The copy of the letter reads as follows: "Congressman Danny K. Davis and the Davis for Congress campaign committee appreciate your generous financial contribution for the 2006 Primary Election. It helps him to be re-elected so that he can continue to represent the public interest.

Federal Law requires political committees to report the name, address, occupation and employer for each individual whose contributions aggregate in excess of $200.00 in an election cycle. We must also make certain that contributors know that their contributions are not tax deductible.

The name of your occupation and employer are missing from our report. We would appreciate you supplying us with the requested information listed below so that we can meet the requirements of the law. Please return it in the self-addressed stamped envelope or fax the information to 773/261-3647.

I appreciate the time, effort and consideration given to this request."
